THE LOSS OF A FEW YEARS

The Spanish-American war occurred seven years ago. My goodness, time does fly. It really doesn't seem that long. Though it has been only seven years ago many things have happened since then. The New York World calls attention to the fact that a majority of the principal actors in that drama have since died or retired from public life—a seemingly remarkable fact.

It was seven years Monday since the destruction of Cervera's fleet. It is less than seven years since Cuba was made free and the Philippines and Porto Rico were ceded to the United States. In that brief time President McKinley and Vice-President Hobart have died. So has Mr. Hay, the Ambassador to Great Britain whose services did much to prevent European interference. Gen. Lawton, Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, Rear-Admiral Sampson and Capt. Philip are dead. Gen. Miles, Gen. Shafter, Gen. Otis, Gen. Young, Gen. Wheeler, Rear-Admiral Schley and Capt. Cook have been retired. Dewey would have been retired but for his rank as full Admiral.

Secretary Long has returned to private life. So has Gen. Woodford, the Minister to Spain at the time war was declared. Secretary Alger, now a Senator, has just announced that the condition of his health will not permit him to be a candidate for re-election. Gen. Eagan no longer wrestles with the problems of the Commissary Department of the army, directing his warlike skill against the small boys of West End avenue.

Gen. Hawley, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate in 1898, and Mr. Boutelle, Chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, are dead. Cushman K. Davis, who as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and as a member of the Peace Commission had much to do with the treaty with Spain, has passed away. So have Senators Hear, Hanna and Quay and Speaker Reed.

In Cuba Gomez and Garica are dead. Spain has lost Premier Sagasta. De Lome, who was given his passports; Montijo, who was defeated by Dewey; Toral, who surrendered Santiago and Martinez-Campos, Weyler and Cervera are still alive.

Lieut.-Col. Roosevelt has become President, Col. Wood a Major-General, and Adna R. Chaffee, No. 81 on the list of lieutenant-colonels at the beginning of 1898, is now Lieutenant-General and head of the army.

The days of the Spanish war may have witnessed a new birth of power, but the days that have passed since then have removed so many notable men that the war of 1898 almost seems to have been fought by another generation.

A reference made by the Telegram to the fireworks display appears to have made a wrong impression. The work was purchased in Pittsburgh through a local firm. The idea got out some way that the display could be seen and heard for miles. As the result there was some disappointment. The fault appears to have been the fact that they were too far away from the main portion of the city to be seen. The effect of the set pieces, which were very beautiful was lost in the distance. There appears to have been a lack of judgment as to proper distance. It is true some of the exploding pieces were not up to the standard, something unavoidable in a collection of the sort. This has been satisfactorily adjusted by a reduction in the aggregate bill for the works, and there is no fault to find with the firm through which they were ordered. This firm was just as anxious that they be a success as the committee was, and regrets, as does the committee, that the effects were not entirely up to expectations. An injustice should not be done them for something they were not accountable for.

The Japanese appear to have at last converted the Czar to their way of thinking, and now he is busy giving orders that Russian warships be sunk. Seriously speaking, however the desperation of the Russian situation is emphasized, when the Russian government finds it necessary to sink its own ships to get rid of the sailors who have rebelled. Up to this time on land the orders were to kill the rebels and destroy their property, but since the sailors have taken possession of the ships, government property must be destroyed to get rid of them. This suggests that, if the revolutionists were to get possession of the Czar's own quarters, he would direct that those quarters be burned. And thus it is the flame of destruction is approaching the throne. In the light of recent events may it not be said that the Czar in his dire situation is unwittingly plotting his own destruction and the overthrow of his dynasty?

What an awful dirty city Wheeling must be! One of its papers makes the astounding assertion that the consumption of water there per capita per day is actually two hundred and fifty gallons. No one would want to cast reflections on the capacity of the big breweries there, and naturally, the thought comes that the water used is largely for exterior baths. Be it so, the suggestion that the inhabitants be taken down to the Ohio river in droves occasionally to save the water works machinery ought to take well from an economical standpoint.

* * * * * PORTLAND EXPOSITION POINTS * * * * *

"The Man with the Hoe" Millet's famous picture, which inspired Edwin Markham's still more famous poem, is one of the costly works on view at the Museum of Art, Lewis and Clark Exposition. The painting is insured for $100,000. Edwin Markham, the poet, was born and reared at Oregon City, only a dozen miles from the Exposition site.

Gov. Folk, of Missouri, the famous boulder fighter, has promised to be present at the Lewis and Clark Exposition on Missouri Day, Sept. 5. He will deliver an address at the Exposition, and the Missouri Society of Oregon proposes to honor him with an elaborate banquet at one of the Portland hotels.

During the first three weeks of the Lewis and Clark Exposition there were more than 300,000 gate admissions. It is figured that this is 200 per cent. better than any previous exposition has done, during the opening weeks, considering the population of Portland and its vicinity. The gratifying attendance during the first month practically insures the financial success of the Fair.

The delegates to the convention of the National Editorial Association at Guthrie, Okla., reached the Lewis and Clark Exposition on Monday, June 25, to spend several days seeing the sights. A reception in honor of the editors was given Monday evening in the New York state building, by President Goode, of the Exposition. The press associations of Utah and California visited the Fair the week before.

* * * * * THE SERVANT PROBLEM. * * * * *

Prof. J. W. Robinson, principal of the colored schools, of this city in a lengthy article on the servant problem, concludes the subject in the Tar Heel as follows:

"I am reminded of the story of the steamer whose supply of fresh water had been exhausted for several days. The captain from his cabin sighted another vessel far away on the ocean, he signalled the vessel for water, quickly came the reply, 'Let down your buckets where you are.' The command was obeyed and cool and sparkling water was secured, a current of fresh water was flowing through that part of the sea. I would say to our people, let down your buckets where you are. Let us take advantage of the opportunities that are offered in the 'Sunny South.'

"What has been the cause of this unrest? It is no doubt the cause of unjust discrimination on the one hand and false hopes on the other. Too many of our people are leaving the farms and crowding into the cities.

"The relation of the employer and employee should be a most cordial one.

"A man who has no other interest in the service he renders than the money he expects to receive is not the most valuable servant, nor is he who has no higher ambition than to remain a servant the most desirable.

"If a man is working on a farm either for wages or for a share of the crops, he should hope some day to own a farm himself if only but a few acres.

"The man, even though he be a servant, who owns a home becomes a better and more desirable citizen. He is less liable to become dissatisfied and join the throng who are indiscriminately flocking into the northern cities. The same is true of the servants of other industries. Whatever the nature of the service may be it should be elevated to the plane of a dignified vocation.

"It is my belief that if the employer would encourage his employees to become small share holders in his business he would aid a great deal in the solution of the service problem. When possible the servant should be paid sufficiently to live comfortably and at the same time 'lay up something for a rainy day.'

"Every avenue for service is open to the Negro in the South, he does not meet with the opposition of organized labor unions which confronts him in the other sections of the country. Take from a poor man the opportunity to earn his bread and you not only deprive him of his liberty, but you will soon deprive him of life. The Negro is here and here to stay. He is an American citizen and he should be made to feel that this is his home, he should be encouraged to continue to manifest a common interest in the progress of the nation. The demand for intelligent labor is becoming more urgent than ever before. Domestic who go North and to many of the Southern cities testify to the fact that intelligent service is preferable to ignorant and unskilled service.

"It is my belief that every boy and every girl, regardless to race or color, ought to be taught how to do some kind of work and to do it well. I believe with all my soul that industrial training should constitute a part of every boy's and every girl's education. Whether he expects to be a lawyer, doctor, preacher, teacher, merchant, business man, mechanic, farmer or any other vocation he (Continued on page five.)

A fever of investigation is in the air, suppose you, madam, start investigating the truthfulness of the advertisements you read!

You are probably amazed at the disclosures in the insurance and financial world and in municipal investigations occurring in many of our large cities.

You would probably be as much amazed if you would take the time to investigate the truthfulness of many of the advertisements you read, as there are many statements made which are not borne out by facts.

We do not pose as reformers or critics of what other people choose to do, but we do claim to have a little horse sense in business, and through thick and thin we are sticking to our standard, which is Everything Exactly as Represented in our Advertisements.

This you may prove any day to your own satisfaction, by bringing in this circular or any of our advertisements which may come to your notice.
